from Liverpool and the American barkentine Irmgard from San Francisco arrived this afternoon.

The barks Albert and S C Allen and barkentine S N Castle will all sail for San Francisco either tomorrow or Wednesday with ballast cargo of sugar.

The steamer Mikahala is getting to be the carrier of bad news.

Some time ago this steamer brought the news of H B M Commissioner Hawes' death on Hawaii and yesterday came with her the news of Dr J K Smith's murder.

It appears at length that the crew of the American ship City of Philadelphia, lost off Port Stanley, Falkland islands, a year or two ago because there was no seaworthy tug there to rescue her,
did not altogether die in vain, says the Marine Journal. The representations made to the British authorities as the result of that catastrophe have had the effect of having two ships of war stationed there, which, according to a recent report of the U S Consul there, have in the past six months been the means of saving two other merchant vessels and,

through the services of their divers, temporarily repaired one of them in a short time and at reasonable rates. That work, the Consul says, could not otherwise have been done at all without the importation of divers, as the divers there are not considered competent and charge besides very high for their services. The erection of a hospital suitable for the port is also being considered and the colonial government is projecting a pier that will enable any vessel to discharge the cargo without the aid of lighters.

BY POLICE AT CALLAO.

Inquiry here confirms the story coming from Lima to the effect that the State Department has lodged a demand with the United States charge of legation at Lima for the release of the mate of the American bark "Uncle John." He was ashore on December 19 last at Callao, and was arrested because of his constant demand for "Rainer Beer." On tap or in bottles at the Criterion Saloon.

A WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

"So you don't believe in woman's rights," I said approvingly.
"Oh, but I do," she answered promptly.
"Then why do you condemn the ladies who advocate them? That's a bit inconsistent, even for you, Clie."
"Oh, those women," said she, tossing the paper scornfully aside. "They're utterly absurd. What's the use of votes and clubs and short hair and bloomers—ugh!
—and all that sort of thing? They're the wrong rights, but a woman has plenty of right rights, as you'll find out, sir."
"Don't try to look majestic, you little goose. I could put you in my overcoat pocket, remember—nearly."
"You'd be taking me out every minute to look at me."
"I dare say I should, and putting you in again whenever you were tiresome." She lay back in the corner of the big armchair and laughed with great amusement.
"You poor, misguided young man!
You'll find out some day. If your pocket were as big as St. Paul's, you couldn't and you wouldn't. You know you wouldn't."
"Because of the innate goodness of man?"
"No, because of the innate niceness of me."
"Am I to understand that right, No. 1, is not to be shut up?"
"Can't be shut up," she corrected.
"Never could be shut up; never can be shut up. For women never, never, never."
"The tune falls flat without an accompaniment."
"A male one?"
"Certainly, a subsiding male accompaniment."
"Suppose a woman can't get one?"
"She always can, if she's nice."
"Suppose she isn't?"
"Then she doesn't count. But all women are nice in some way to someone. That's right, No. 2."
"Won't a 'nice' woman 'obey'?" Vide marriage service, which I understand from your brother, you've been studying."
"No need, my dear boy. I've known it since I was 10."
"Don't you accept the 'obey'?"
"Certainly. You needn't look so anxious."
"Woman's right, No. 4, is evidently to be inconsistent."
"That's merely part of the great right to do as she pleases."
"How do you square that with obedience?"
"Doesn't 'obey' mean 'obey some order'?"
"Yes—es, I suppose so." I'm always suspicious when a woman gets to logic.
"Well, if a 'nice' woman doesn't like an order, she manages that it isn't given."
"But if it should be?" I began to get triumphant here.
"She gets it rescinded." Clie is really beyond all argument sometimes.
"That doesn't give her authority over man, anyhow."
"The queen's wish is a command."
"So is the king's."
"If—If she lets him wish it."
"Look here, Clie, you didn't give me fair warning of your tyranny. I'm half inclined to back out."
"Oh, you ungrateful man! I am completely spoiling you. Didn't I let you play football yesterday?"
"Because you like to see the game."
"I don't much like to see you play."
"That's rather uncomplimentary. I am generally reputed to play pretty well."
"You know that I don't want to attack your play. The report says that you."
"Probably written by some one who didn't see the game."
"Nonsense! I meant that you might get hurt."
"I can take care of myself." Sometimes the papers say I'm too rough, but those confounded reporters don't understand the game.
"But you have to take care of me."
"Is that another of your rights?"
"To be taken care of?"
"Great care of," I corrected.
"If you please."
"I do please, very much, but rights cannot be matters of favor."
"Yes they are—women's rights."
"Mere favors!"
"Compulsory favors."
"You are marvelously illogical, Clie."
"An undoubted right."
"But the other rights, Clie? If they depend on a man's granting them, how can a woman be sure of them?"
"Will you?"
"The question is, Will men in general?"
"No, no. I don't care about men in general. The question is, Will you refuse them to me?"
"I fancied there was a bit of a firm set about Clie's mouth for all her smiling, and I didn't smile at all. "Do as she pleases," is rather a large order, but, then, Clie would never please anything very dreadful."
"I expect not," said I, with half a sigh.
"I'm sure I shouldn't refuse her anything that I could possibly help anyhow. Then we sat quiet for a few minutes.
"Jock!"
"Well, Clie?"
"If you were clever, you would ask me a question."
"About my rights, if any?"
"No. I'll tell you something," she said in a very confidential way. So I went and sat on the arm of her chair accordingly.
"If mean—I shan't ask you for all my rights—not to do just as I please—if you don't want me to." She had grown suddenly big eyed and serious, and there was a little—ever such a little—quiver about her mouth.
"Then it isn't a question of rights," I whispered, taking hold of her little hands.
"No," she said very softly, "not between you and me."
But I believe she will do just as she pleases notwithstanding.—St. Paul's.

Legal Extravagance.

"Hurrah! Hurrah!" cried a young lawyer, who had succeeded to his father's practice. "I've settled that old chancery suit at last." "Settled it!" cried the astonished parent. "Why, I gave you that as an annuity for your life."—"Mark Lemon's Jest Book."

The One Spur Horseman.

A student riding, being jeered on the way for wearing but one spur, said that if one side of his horse went on it was not likely that the other would stay behind.—"Mark Lemon's Jest Book."
